Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

3. Claims 1-5 and 13-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Schnoebelen et al. (US Publication No. 2005/0088693) in view of Bulman (US Publication No. 2003/005125).

Regarding claims 1 and 2, Schnoebelen discloses system for image display comprising:

(a) a computer with a first modem located at a first location and connected via the modem to a communications network (see col. 3, lines 0054-0055); (c) an internet website containing a database of image references for providing imagery to the computer (see col. 6, lines 0101-0102); remote color display device upon receipt of image is capable of controlling display image of said image without further intervention; and means for allowing selection of images from the database to be displayed on the remote color display (see col. 6, lines 0104-0106). However, Schnoebelen fails to explicitly teach a remote color display device with a second modem and a controller, the remote color display located at a second location and capable of image display, the remote color display device connected to the communications network via the modem.

Bulman discloses a remote color display device with a second modem and a controller, the remote color display located at a second location and capable of image display, the remote color display device connected to the communications network via the modem, said remote color display device upon receipt of said image is capable of controlling display of said image without further user intervention (see col. 7, lines 0080-0082). It would have been obvious to one of an ordinary skill in the art, having the teachings of Schnoebelen and Bulman before him at the time the invention was made, to modify a remote color display device upon receipt of image is capable of controlling display image of said image without further intervention, as taught by to Bulman digitized photographic image of Schnoebelen. One would have motivated to make such a combination in order to display images that download from Internet, and enable users using a digital frame for displaying images from their own selective homepage from remote location.

Regarding claim 3, Bulman discloses a system for image display as recited wherein the means for allowing selection is a computer with a connection to the internet website, the computer being located at a second location remote from the first location (see col. 7, lines 0082-0084).

Regarding claim 4, Bulman discloses a system for image display as recited wherein the selected images are stored at the second location (see col. 8, lines 0084-0085).

Regarding claim 5, Bulman discloses a system for image display as recited wherein the selected images are stored at a third location remote from both the first location and the second location (see col. 9, lines 0100-0102).

Claim 13 is analyzed as previously discussed with respect to claim 1 and 2 above.

Regarding claims 14 and 15, Massarky discloses an internet website containing a database of image and image references for providing imagery to the first and second remote color displays and accessible from the first and second remote color display (see col. 23, lines 0300-0302). One would have motivated to make such a combination in order to display images that download from Internet, and enable users using a digital frame for displaying images from their own selective homepage from remote location.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. (see PTO-892).
